French Class by Katie & Elena

In French class we are learning about a boy named Harry that goes to France. We are learning the differences between culture in France and culture in the United States. Food is very different. They eat snails! At restaurants if the waiter serves you ice in your water they will arrested. Not really, but they do not drink cold water. They eat raw eggs and raw meat. We would NOT try that.

This week I played hockey with Kyle in the addition. I just started playing roller hockey this year. I go to the park with a basketball court and play pick up. By Will and Baby Yoda wish you a happy May 4th!

May the fourth be with you

Student of the Week: Charlotte

This week's student of the week is Charlotte. Charlotte is a kind, funny, nice, young girl. She is 11 years old. This is Charlotte's fifth year at Mandala. We are lucky to have her at our school. If Charlotte could live anywhere in the world she would live in Japan.

Charlotte says she would like to have the ability to slow down time as a super power.

Charlotte says she likes ferrets and wants to have one as a pet. The best book she's ever read was Into the Pit by Scott Cawthon.

Charlotte's most useful talent is Tae Kwon Do and that she can twist her fingers into a knot. Charlotte also has great acting skills and is very animated.

If Charlotte was tiny she would live in someone's lunchbox and eat people's food.

When she grows up Charlotte wants to be an engineer and a roboticist so she can make robots.

Interview by Jackson

In Ms. Kelsey's literature group we are reading Call it Courage. Sachin gives this book 10/10 or five stars. Kyle does too. They both love the adventure, the protagonist, Mafatu, and his two pets. They like that Mafatu found his own island. Sachin loves the imagery and how much they explain what things look like, especially the new island and the barrier reef.
